Will Come Up Before the Superior Court in New Haven on Tuesday--Fell from Pole Breaking Spinal Cord

In the New Haven county superior court on Tuesday morning the case of the administrator of the estate of Walter H. Ivins against the city of Norwich. The suit was brought for $20,000 before Judge Ivins' death. One of the injuries he received in this city April 10 of last year. The suit is brought in New Haven because that was his home. Attorney Frank R.
Brown will represent the city and witnesses in the case have been summoned from here to the court on Tuesday, when it is assigned, but may possibly not be heard until the following day.
Mr. Ivins was in the employ of the Southern New England Telephone company at the time of the accident, and had climbed a pole at the corner of Boswell avenue and Broad street. While on the pole he fell to the ground, striking on his back on a valise. This caused a breaking of his spinal cord, and it was so diagnosed at the time.
He was taken in a short time to New Haven, his home, and was in a hospital there for a long time, but died September 22 of last year, in New Haven. It is claimed in the suit that he received a shock from a wire of the local gas and electric department which was not properly protected, and that the accident to escape into the wire which he took hold of.

Sunday morning, a very interesting working among the colored people for twenty-six years. She spoke of the great progress the negroes have made since being set free. Probably half of the nearly ten million can read and write, while the other half are as yet ignorant. The cabins are fast giving
